CHEERING NEWS FROM CUBA.

The Surrender of the Virginius The Growing Strength of the Patriots-Their Forces Closely Investing Manzanillo.

Private despatches containing Cuban news up to noon of Saturday last were received in this city yesterday. The demonstration by the populace on Thursday night was thought to have been a blind engineered by emissaries of the Spanish Government to enable them quietly to carry out the orders from Madrid. For while the Havanese were sleeping soundly after the fatigue of the previous night's exertions, about 4 o'clock on Friday morning the tug quietly floated out from her wharf to the buoy where the Virginius was moored, and, running under her starooard bow, sent a hawser on board. The Virginius's cable was slipped, and without a word or scarcely a sound the vessel began to move slowly toward the entrance of the harbor. She passed the line of shore batteries and was soon under the guns of Morro Castle, from which a boat put off with an officer bearing the papers and instructions from Madrid. As the Virginius was rounding the last point before reaching the open ocean, the Isabel la Catolica ran alongside and sent a line on board. The tug cast off and returned to Havana, and the war steamer with her convoy steamed away for Bahia Honda.

The sururise of the Havanese when they saw that the Virginius was gone was very great, But the absence of the war steamer explained that the Virginius had not been burned or sunk. This carrying out of the orders from Madrid seemingly without the slightest opposition from the volunteers and their friends, who had boasted so loudly on the previous evening in the Casino "that the Virginius should float in blood before she should be given up," has increased the power of the home Government and utterly destroyed the faction represented by the volunteers, who have been greatly feared, though generally detested. After what has been said by the editors of the Diario and Voz de Cuba, it is believed they will not remain on the island.

Much of the success in executing the orders of the home Government by the authorities in Havana was attributed to Minister Soler de Ultramar. It is believed that the authorities in the sole of the power has been sufficient to influence the authorities not to compatchers with the Cubans. At first the folial, There is a powerful secret organization in Havana which is believed to embrace the leading sympathizers with the Cubans. A carry out the orders from Madrid. No information has been received to-night

No information has been received to-might concerning the Virginius survivors at Santiago de Cuba, but no doubt exists that they were delivered up to our authorities yesterday. It would take some time for news to reach Havana from Santiago de Cuba, and this, it is considered, accounts for the fact that the intelligence of their release has not been communicated to the Government. The following despatch was received to-night by Secretary Robeson:

Key Wisst, Dec. 17.

This Government insisted that the Virginius should be given into its possession at a Cuoan port, and the Spanish authorities decided that Bahia Honda was the most suitable place at which the surrender could be made.

TERRILL'S MIDNIGHT RIDE FROM WHITE PLAINS TO RYE.

A Black Horse, a Blue Overcont, a Drab Hat, a Blood-Stained Musket Barrel, and a Broken Skull-Telling Testimony in the Robinson Assassination Trial.

Yesterday in the Westchester Court of Oyer and Terminer, before Judge Tappen, the trial of Peter Terrill, indicted for the murder of Gilbert H. Robinson of Rye Neck on the 28th of April, 1808, was continued. The court house was crowded by many of the best citizens of the county. Terrill was pale and agitated. Mr. M. Fisher and his wife of White Plains testified that Terrill was in their employ at the time of the murder. He drove a milk route and did chores. Mr. Fisher had heard of the murder, and had heard that Terrill was suspected, but did not know that he went out of the house on the night of the murder. Mrs. Margaret A.

Rozell testified:

On Saturday, April 24, 1868, I went to nurse a child for Mrs. Fisher. I stayed there five weeks. On Moneay night following my arrival I was up with Annue, a sick child. Between it and it of clock that night I heard one of Mr. Fisher's horses go out of the yard, under the window of the room where I was. My attention was

He slept over the kitchen. I made his bed next morning. I saw what I thought to be an army overcoat on a chair. Saw the overcoat before that on Sunday morning in a bureau drawer. On Tuesday morning at breakfast Bridget, the cook, told me that Terrili and told her that Gilbert H. Robinson, the Mamaroneck jeweller, had been murdered. When Terrill came in I said, "What a terrille murder that was, i hope the murderer will be brought to justice." Terrill TURNED RED IN THE FACE and dropped his eyes. He did not speak. That day I saw Terrill in the garden. He did not work as usual, he stood at times as though meditating, leaning on the hoe handle. Don't know of any other hired man sleeping about Mr. Fisher's house at the time mentioned. Made Peter's bed every morning while I was at Mr. Fisher's. A PISTOL IN A BARROOM.

NEW YORK, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1873.

What Recorder Hackett Knows About the Trigger, and What Assistant District Attorney Rollins Doesn't Know About It. The case of John Simpson, an up-town

plumber, tried in the General Sessions yesterday for an alleged felonious assault upon William Moynahan, became extraordinary from the different impressions created by the testimony. The undisputed facts were that on the evening of July 10 the complainant, Moynahan, with a Mr. Stead, an elderly man, went into Mr. Zimmerman's beer saloon, Fortieth street and Sixth avenue. They found there Mr. Simpson, his friend, named Hinchley, and a policeman in civilian's clothes. Mr. Stead knew Simpson, and saluted him cheerfully with the words, "Hello, fraud, are you here?" Simpson answered, "Hello, old usurer, are you here?" Moynahan cailed for drinks, and Stead slipped money into his hand to pay for them. He didn't wish "the house," as he expressed it, to be invited to join in the bibulation, and his demonstrative way attracted the attention of Simpson, who conceived himself to be insulted. "What's the reason you don't treat?" asked Simpson." Oh, you've had enough out of me," said Stead, "You've swindled me out of the amount of those notes, about a thousand dollars, and that's enough." [Mr. Siead on the witness stand was anxious to test the story of his purchase of had notes, but the Court would not permit.] Mr. Simpson repelled the insinuation that he had done any wrong, verv energetically. He applied to Mr. Stead several unprintable epithets, and cailed him a usurer. At this point Moynahan interfered in behalf of his ciderly friend, and struck Simpson in the face. Shortly afterward a pistol shot was heard, and there was a general confusion. The ball entered the lower part of the door. It was claimed on the part of the prosecution, conducted by Assistant District Attorney Rollins, that the prisoner had tried to shoot Moynahan was shot at. He could not understand how a man with a straight-barrelied revolver could miss a man he was shooting to kill at the short range of three feet, and indicated to Mr. Rollins a purpose to instruct the jury that the facts testified to by the witnesses did not make out a case of assault with intent to kill or with intent to do bodily harm.

Mr. Rollins, however, Insisted that the case should be detailed. The Recorder said he would not, in the face of this objection, do anything which might even seem to trench upon the province of the jury, and he therefore told the prisoner's counsel to proceed in call merman's beer saloon, Fortleth street and Sixth avenue. They found there Mr. Simpson, his friend, named Hinchley, and a to impenetrable gray. Serious delay to thousands of business men was caused by the fog being the densest from 4 to 9 in the morning, when the ferry boats carry crowds from New Jersey, Long Island, and Staten Island to their business in the city. The ceaseless clanging of fog bells and the shricking of whistles made a pandemonium on the water, and the sounds were made more impressive by the surrounding made more impressive by the surrounding darkness. The few glimpses that were caught of the heavens showed a blue expanse, with scarcely a cloud. From the high lands New York seemed to have been submerged in the ocean, on which Trinity Church spire was anchored as a buoy.

The ferry men say that the fog was the heaviest they ever saw. The fog is more dangerous by day than in the night, as lights may aid in steering clear of vessels in the darkness.

THE DELAY ON THE FERRIES.

On the East river the Roosevelt street and Hunter's Point ferries made no trips. The others ran at long intervals. The closing of the Williamsburgh ferries drove their traffic to Fulton and Catharine ferries. This and the lengthening of the intervals of the Fulton ferry boat trips from seven to twenty minutes filled the Brooklyn ferry houses with crowds. To accommodate foot passengers, no horses and wagons were permitted to cross to New York by the Fulton ferry until it was nearly noon. They made a line extending up Fulton street nearly half a mile. Wall street ferry in the morning plied with one boat, and Hamilton and South ferries with two at irregular intervals. The morning Staten Island boats were an hour behind time.

The North river ferry boats ran closer to time than the East river boats. On the long Hoboken ferry, boats arrived from a half to an hour late, and on the Chambers street ferry tew trips were made.

Both lines of Harlem boats were laid up, as Both lines of Harlem boats were laid up, as their speed made them almost sure of collision with strange craft.

No serious accidents occurred. Slight damage was done to one North river and several East river boats.

The Nebraska, early in the morning, in crossing to Grand street, New York, from Williamsburgh, missed her slip and ran into a ship, and her passengers were landed at Delances street, which was reached by clambering over several coal barges. On Fulton ferry the Farragut damaged her rudder by running into a sloop, and the Winoma's railing on one side was stripped off in a collision with a schooner. The Arizona of the Roosevelt ferry had her planking and railing on one end ripped up in a collision with a sailing vessel. At noon a grand procession was formed of all the military and civic societies—George Parker, Grand Marshal—and marched to Reynolds's Hill, where the corner stone was to be laid. Here thousands had congregated to witness the ceremonies, which were conducted by Grand Master James W. Husted of Westchester. The exercises were entirely Masonic, and similar to those which surrounded the laying of the corner stone of the new Capitol at Albany. After the corner stone was laid cannon were fired and the bells of the city were rung. The procession moved up town again, and there the distinguished guests were tendered a banquet at the Opera House. The welcome speech was made by Mayor Eastman. The Opera House was handsomely decorated, and the tables, which were provided for three hundred persons, were loaded with good things. After the speech-making and eating the most of the guests returned to their homes on the early evening trains.

When completed this bridge will save over one hundred miles of railroad track between the New England States and the Pennsylvania coal fields. The entire length will be about one mile, of which about half—a trible less than 2.500 feet—is over the channel of the river, and the other half consists of approaches, being mainly on the east side. The height of the bridge from the water to the bottom chord of the huge trusses is 150 feet, and the trusses themselves will be about sixty-five feet high, so that the entire elevation of the track above high water mark will be nearly two hundred feet. There will be four plers in the channel, and one on each side close to the bank, so that the main bridge will consist of five immense spans, each five hundred feet long. The land approaches will be made up of shorter spans.

THE CONDITION OF THE TREASURY.

Immediate Relief Necessary to Save it from Bankruptcy-The $41,000,000 Reserve Nearly Half Exhausted.

Washington, Dec. 17.-Several prominent members of Congress to-day, while expressing their views against the proposed holiday recess, said if the Senate agreed to the House resolution for that purpose more than a month must elapse before anything could be done for the relief of the Treasury. They alluded to the fact that while the redemption of the loan of 1858 involved additional obligations, the extraordinary appropriation of four millions for the navy exceeded what could possibly be saved by a reduction of the estimates, and besides the Secretary had already drawn eighteen millions and a half from the forty-four million reserve without which the Treasury would now be bankrupt. The reserve was constantly being drawn upon, and therefore it was imperative, with a due regard to the public credit, to pass measures of relief without delay. What these should be they were not prepared to say, but they, with others, were prepared to restore the duty on tea and coffee and tobacco, which were the more easily collectable, or they would agree to a temporary loan of say $50,000,000. At all events Congress should not think of a holiday adjournment until ample provision be made for the Treasury, the receipts of which yesterday were not more than one-third of what they would have been but for the effects of the panic. while the redemption of the loan of 1858 in-

THE KELSEY COMPLICATIONS.

A Wrangle Over the Reward Offered for the Body-New Lawsuits.
In April last Mr. J. A. Woodhull, Supervisor of Huntington, was authorized to offer a reward of $1,000 for the discovery of Charles G. Kelsey's body. Mr. Woodhull has always been credited with a leaning toward the tar party, so instead of obeying his instructions literally he offered $750 for the body dead, and $250 for the discovery of Charles G. Kelsey alive. Kelsey's brothers offered a reward of $500. On the 29th of August a pair of legs were found floating in Oyster Bay by John Franklin and William Ludiam, and after a prolonged inquest the jury identified them as those of Charles G. Kelsey. Prior to the inquest Supervisor Woodhull viewed the remains and said he was satisfied they were those of the murdered man. After the inquest the Kelsey brothers applied to Judge John R. Reid, who is also Surrogate. for letters of administration, which were granted. Then Franklin and Ludiam claimeditheir reward. The Kelsey brothers paid their $500, but Supervisor Woodhull put them off time after time on the plea that he had no money. Afterward he offered to pay one-half of the amount, declining to pay the balance because only one-half of the body had been found. He agreed, however, to submit the affair to arbitration before Judge Reid, but before the hearing was had, and after the town auditors had authorized the Supervisor to borrow $750 to pay the reward. Dr. Geo. B. Banks, one of those originally indicted for riot and assault, and Isaac Rogers, one of the sureties for Royal and Rudolph Sammis, who are indicted for murder in the second degree, obtained an injunction forbidding Mr. Woodhull to pay the reward, on the ground that the body was not that of Kelsey. At the suggestion of Mr. Thos. Young, counsel for the claimants, Supervisor Woodhull retained the Hon. Henry C. Platt, who at once went before Judge Reid and succeeded in getting the injunction arder veacted. This done, the counsel for the claimants called on Supervisor Woodhull, but were coolly informed that he did not intend to pay it. At midnight on Sunday the attorney for the defendants (Banks and the Sammis brothers) roused Judge Reid from his rest and obtained another injunction, which was served upon the Supervisor before breakfast Monday morning. Franklin and Ludlam are about to bring suit against Supervisor Woodhull in the Supreme Court for the reward, claiming that as he has not acted in accordance with nis instructions he should be held personally liable. William Ludiam, and after a prolonged inquest the jury identified them as those

LIFE IN THE METROPOLIS.

DASHES HERE AND THERE BY THE

SUN'S REPORTERS. The Rollwagen Will Complications. The conflicting interests involved in an in-heritance of haif a million; dollars were represented yesterday before Surrogate Hutchings. An array of lawyers extended the whole length of two long tables, and for two hours they argued a point preliminary to the fight which is to be their feast. Frederick Roll-wagen, the testator, died on the lith day of last October. Three sons are the only children surviving. A deceased daughter is represented by seven grandchildren of the testator. The sone are becaused daughter is represented by seven grandchildren of the daughter is represented by seven grandehildren of the testator. The sons are sequeathed only a life interest in a small part of their father's estate, the bulk being given in fee simple to Magdalena, his widow, who also is to receive one-third of the income of everything. A possible postnumous child was mentioned in the will, who would inherit one-fifth of the estate, and in case of its death that fifth was to go to the mother. Magdalena, Samuel S. Browning, one of the deceased daughter's children, applied to the mother. Magdalena, Samuel S. Browning, one of the deceased daughter's children, applied the surface of the deceased daughter's children, applied the beginning of the suit in the Surrogate's Court. The whole subject under discussion the two hours of yesterday was Emily, the wife of one of the sons. The motion to make her a contesting party in the proceedings was opposed on the ground that her husband had only a life interest in the testator's estate, and could never have more unless the will was broken; that both the husband and wife were young, and he had as fair a prospect of outliving her as she him, and her right of dower was too remote to allow her to become a party to the proceedings. The Surrogate held this under advisement.

Dry Goods Failures.

Last week Edson Bradley & Co., 495 Broadway, failed for upward of $400,000. Later in the week West, Call & Whittemore suspended, and yesterday the notes of Oberholser, Keefer & Co., dry goods jobbers, $27 Broadway, went to protest. The creah has been expected by the last named firm for several days. Their purchases were made when goods were high, and instead of a brisk fall trade they found that no concess. pected by the last named firm for several days. Their purchases were made when goods were high, and instead of a brisk fall trade they found that no concessions in price induced heavy purchases and their stock diminished only in value. Their notes were rapidly maturing and no feasible plan of meeting them presented itself, so on Monday they called together one representative of each of their five principal creditors, and placed the books and stock in their hands. Mr. Page of Faukher, Page & Co. is Chairman of this creditors' committee. Yesterday and Tuesday they were engaged all day in taking stock and examining the books. The liabilities are ascertained to be $600,000. This is distributed among 150 creditors, principally commission and jobbing houses. The purchases of the house were made chiefly from these classes of dealers, so that their foreign indebtedness is very light. The creditors generally have agreet to able the recommeamendation of the creditors committee.

The firm of Oberhoiser & Keefer is two years old. The senior partner brought some capital from a Western city. Mr. Keefer had been a partner of Kdson Bradley. The two furnished $5,000 capital, and had besides $150,000 special capital. Their business reached $3,000,000 a year.

Edson Bradley & Co. have offered the creditors a compromise based upon 65 per cent. of their inaebtedness. It is likely that their terms will be accepted.

An Old Quarrel Settled.

Mr. E. Delafield Smith, the Corporation Counsel, rendered an opinion yesterday in regard to the relative authority of the Superintendent of Markets, who is one of Comptroller Green's subordinates, and the Superintendent of Incumbrances, who belongs to Commissioner Van Vort's department, over the markets and the streets bordering on them. Mr. Smith says that both have the power to clear the avenues and approaches to the markets, and to preserve the streets and sidewalks to their legitimate uses. But neither has the power to let or to permit to be permanently incumbered any part of a street, sidewalk, or place opened to public use. He adds that the streets and sidewalks are held in trust for the people at large, and that all ordinances of the Common Council authorizing either of these officials to make the streets and sidewalks are the markets a source of income to the city, or a convenience to individuals, are not and void.

The Brooklyn Corone.... Supervisor Fietcher, Chairman of the Coroners

Investigating Committee, was at work all day yester-day in his researches among the records of the Brook-lyn Health Officer and the County Clerk's archives. On the previous day he found thirty-four names charged on two of the Coroners' monthly bills for which the certwo of the Coroners monthly bills for which the certificates of death were missing from the Health office.

A search in the County Clerk's office discovered inquisitions corresponding to every name on the bills. The inquisitions are seemingly properly signed by jurors, and the place of hodding it is fully set forth in cade case. If they are feltitious it can easily be proved or going to the places named or by seeking out the jurymen. Supervisor Fletcher said yesterday: "They may or may not be all right. It is easily proved, and until it is I don't want an impression to go out that we have found something wrong when we haven't."

Nominated to be Rejected. Nelson K. Wheeler, the nominee for the Police Justiceship in the new district formed by the Iwentythird and Twenty-fourth Wards, called on Mayor Have third and Twenty-fourth Wards, called on Mayor Have-mover yesterday. He says that he is only sixty years of age and adds that although he is a resident of Delawars county, he has spent three or four months in each of the pass three or four years in Westchester county with Mr. William B. Ogden, his brother in-law Mr. Ogden says that the salary of a Police Justice Mr. Ogden says that the salary of a Police Joshick will make him very comfortable, and thinks that if he is contrained he will live in Westchester county during insterm of office.

An Alderman said yesterday that Mr. Wheeler would probably be rejected, as the City Fathers did not wish to deprive Mr. Ogden of the privilege of taking care of his relatives.
